

Dia dhaoibh.

On behalf of my nation, I am proud to present Ireland as a candidate for the Security Council. View our TL;DR pitch here.

Eleven months ago, Éire returned to the world stage as an independent powerhouse—in our first election, we garnered over 100 votes and began having large start-ups from the get go. In the time since, our growth has not ceased one bit.

The May 2021 General Election excellently demonstrates this: with a turnout of 140, and with five parties contesting, the results livestream was preceded by a large start-up at Middletown and following a very successful Space Agency launch the previous day.

Ireland finds itself at the vanguard of the community, with exceptional development, an active and skillful Garda Síochána and a NATO-member Defence Forces. Ireland's legislature, the Oireachtas, serves as a model for the world, consistently meeting weekly to debate policy and question the Government.

Our Space Agency is both unique in the community and intricately organised, and our cultural sector is thriving with Nobel Prize nominated RTÉ News and the historic JetÉire.

Employment Demographics

Defence Forces: 22 Garda Síochána: 33

Space Agency: 18 Legislators: 38

Private Business: 75 Barristers: 13

Our return to the United Nations only highlights our desire to further engage with the community, and our outstanding progress underlines our commitment to activity and development within that community.

Two months ago to the date, Ireland commemorated our first Saint Patrick's Day after independence with celebrations, giveaways and contests. It has been the unrelenting and optimistic spirit of the Irish people that has driven our growth thus far, and it would be our pleasure to share such an insightful spirit with the wider international community.

Please consider casting your vote for Éire (Ireland) this Security Council Election. Vótáil Éire!
